Title of Request:	An Educational Platform for Quantum Computing
Duration of Engagement:	3 years
Required Commencement Date:	(Spring 2022)

1. Introduction, Aims and Objectives

The UK's National Quantum Computing Centre (NQCC) seeks to purchase an enterprise licence for a cloud-accessible, educational training platform aimed at familiarising students in higher education, as well as professionals in industry and business, with key concepts in quantum computing, without the requirement for formal training in a related field (such as PhD-level physics, mathematics, and computer science).

The educational training platform should provide individual users with access to a learning environment that includes a series of training modules, whereby users can learn progressively at their own pace, test their knowledge retention, and monitor their progress through to completion of the course. The platform should provide users with a sufficient grounding in the key concepts of quantum computing to provide a pathway into quantum programming, as well as an understanding of quantum circuit design. The learning experience should be supplemented through access to an online community network, driven by users offering mutually supportive learning.

The aim of the NQCC in deploying such a tool is to drive greater awareness, understanding and engagement in quantum computing among the UK workforce from an early stage. This initiative aligns to the NQCC's wider strategic priorities to enable a 'quantum ready' UK economy through delivering skills development and training opportunities.

Target learner profiles within the UK Quantum community have been identified as well as their specific needs in terms of learning and development. The NQCC has mapped learners' profiles against the required level of skills and depth of knowledge desired. Our target learner profiles, and corresponding desired outcomes fall in the following categories:

Learner profile	Desired outcomes
Undergraduate & Graduate Students	Get inspired, grow their skills (including programming), get certified/qualified, generate interest to pursue a career in the field
Technical professional (with a background in science) who will fulfil a technical role in Quantum Computing	Acquire sufficient skills to be able to link the potential of quantum computing to the specific use-case problem they have
Non-technical professional (no science background): e.g., Project / Programme managers, Business Development	Make the link between quantum computing potential and the business problem, creating the business case. Acquire a high-level understanding of basic concepts in quantum computing empowering them to contribute and challenge within the scope of their roles
CXO-level management (mix of technical and non-technical decision makers) who want to assess impact and opportunity of the technology, they are key influencers able to take investments decisions	Acquiring a broad understanding of the technology and its impact in order to gain confidence in investment decision making

Broadly speaking the target audience profiles fall into two main categories: those requiring deep technical understanding to fulfil their roles within Quantum Computing, and those that we need to enable to identify the opportunity for exploitation and to forecast the impact of the technology. Ideally, all of these groups would be addressed with one solution, but our current priority is to address the first category which includes Undergraduate and Graduate Students and Technical Professionals described in the table above.

Further background research activity has been undertaken to identify currently available tools and educational resources, and an assessment of the suitability of these tools has been performed.

2. Background to the Requirement

Overview of the NQCC

The National Quantum Computing Centre (NQCC) is a new research institution, funded through UK Research and Innovation, which is dedicated to accelerating the development of quantum computing by addressing the challenges of scalability. The centre will work with businesses, Government and the research community to deliver quantum computing capabilities (including training and learning resources) for the UK and support the growth of the emerging industry.

The NQCC's programme is being delivered jointly by the research councils, EPSRC and STFC. The centre will be headquartered in a purpose-built facility at Harwell Campus in Oxfordshire, which is due for completion in mid-2023. In addition to laboratory space and infrastructure to build and host quantum computers, the Centre will have seminar and collaboration spaces to facilitate training and skills development activities for learners.

The NQCC has an objective to deliver a Quantum Ready nation as part of its broader vision to put the UK at the forefront of Quantum Computing delivering societal benefits, prosperity, and security.

Quantum computing is an emerging technology with a disruptive potential, however due to its complexity it presents significant entry barriers for some key communities. To take advantage of this opportunity it requires a highly skilled technical workforce, and opportunity facilitators (decision makers) that feel comfortable and confident with the key concepts of the technology. Among other activities, the educational platform specified in this tender will allow us to provide essential skills in the field of quantum computing to professionals and students.

Roles and responsibilities

While our goal is to purchase an enterprise licence for an educational platform, we foresee a high level of engagement between the NQCC's staff and the supplier. The key points of contact overseeing the relationship will be the Business Development Manager, the Outreach and Engagement officer as well as additional Innovation specialists. Following the award of the contract, the NQCC will make user licences available to a number of interested learners based in the UK. The NQCC's staff will regularly monitor the level of engagement with the tool, to be able to inform the supplier of any increase in demand. Additionally, given the fast-pace evolution of the field of quantum computing, we expect the educational content to also undergo upgrades and to reflect latest developments. Any upgrades to the content will be discussed at review points during the contract duration, as specified in the requirements section.

The NQCC's staff will also be responsible for monitoring users' profiles and will have the ability to de-activate licences in the event that the learner's profile does not fulfil minimum requirements (such as being based in the UK).

A quality review process (likely incorporating NQCC staff and select external reviewers appointed by the NQCC) will be necessary before release of the educational tool to the community, and this is outlined in section 5 (timetable).

As a UK national laboratory, the NQCC is committed to the policies and standards of UK Research & Innovation, which can be found here: <https://www.ukri.org/about-us/policies-standards-and-data/>

3. Scope

The scope of the tender is to provide an enterprise licence for an educational, web-based platform for UK-based learners in English, with up to 50 transferable user licences (with pricing options for adding further licences in batches). This requires that the platform is to be delivered through a subdomain available only to users in the UK, with 24/7 access to the learning resources (accepting brief periods of downtime due to fault or maintenance). The platform should be compatible with all major browsers such as; Chrome, Firefox, Safari, Edge etc, and its access must include a registration process, and data capture for user analytics.

This initial service agreement shall cover a Commissioning Period (of up to 6 weeks) and Delivery Period (of three years), see section 5 (timetable).

Within the lifetime of the contract, it is perceived there will be opportunity for expansion to the scope. The platform will focus on targeting our priority learner profiles, however in time it is desirable to:

- a) Expand the target audience for the platform to a wider range of learners.
- b) Increase the learning resources / delivery content to mirror and match the evolution of quantum computing technology.
- c) Expand the delivery medium and content delivery method (e.g., Phone App, video content)

4. Requirement

To achieve the intended impact of the educational platform there are a number of mandatory requirements that must be fulfilled. To further enhance this impact, there is opportunity to include additional desirable requirements.

The total demand and level of user engagement for this service is expected to evolve over time. The level of demand at the time of initial deployment will need to be determined, such as through prospective users registering expressions of interest.

Mandatory requirements

The educational platform must satisfy the following requirements:

Model of Operation

5. Timetable

1. Commissioning Period (up to 6 weeks): Upon signing the contract a "Commissioning Period" will commence (for a period of up to 6 weeks) to allow the platform developer to amend, refine and tailor the solution to meet the requirements prior to the launch of the platform. At the end of the Commissioning Period a review of the solution, by the NQCC Team, will take place to check the tool for adherence to the mandatory requirements. This review process will be completed within a 2-week period and a decision made on approval to launch. The platform launch must take place within 2 weeks following notification of launch by the NQCC to the platform developer. The NQCC reserves the right to terminate the contract at the end of the Commissioning Period if the product does not adequately meet the mandatory requirements, however the platform developer may be offered a short extension (up to 2 weeks) to the Commissioning Period to rectify aspects that fall short of acceptability.

2. Delivery period: The Delivery Period will commence upon launch of the tool and run for 3 years, with annual billing (at a minimum fee level of 50 access licenses per year).

Notes:

During the Commissioning Period, engagement with the NQCC may be sought on a weekly basis to provide feedback on the progress regarding the solution refinement / readiness for launch.

The platform developer may trigger the review process for launch at any time during the Commissioning Period, and thus potentially accelerate the time of the launch and therefore the commencement of the Contract Period.

It is to be noted that the Platform Developer will need to provide information and/or assist with a baseline assessment during an initial kick off meeting at the start of the contract.
